when the Olympia reached the Norfolk navy yard to-day she was immediately boarded by Naval Constructor Evans and his force of assistants. They went into the double bottom of the ship and began their examination of the damage the cruiser sustained when she ran upon the rocks off the coast of Maine last week.

PLATES CRACKED.

Soveral of her plates were found to be cracked and broken, and it was announced she would be docked Wednesday for repairs, which will consume about seven weeks.

As Rear Admiral Joseph B. Coghlan, commander in chief of the Carbbean Ses squadron of the Norfolk navy yard, the receiving ship Franklin first saluted the Olympia as the latter's prow showed around the bend in the southern branch. The Olympia repiled.

NAVAL COURTESIES.

Her guard was paraded and the band assembled as she approached the yard. The officers wore their hot frock coats and there was much ceremony as the senior-Jadmiral invaded the station commanded by Admiral Harrington. As the Colympia passed the Franklin, the blue two-starred pennant denoting the presence of the commanding officer came down, and in its place a two-starred pennant of red appeared. This indicated that the seniority of rank-had-for the time being passed to the officer whose blue pennant flow from the Olympia's truck. The Hartford, now in training service, the flagship of Admiral Frargut, is hourly expected at the navy yard from Hampton Roads for repairs.

While the repairs to the Hartford will be of a minor character, the Olympia will be here, for at least, seven weeks, undergoing the most important and necessary emergency repairs.

BOTTOM NEARLY TORN OUT.

The ship's bottom was almost torn out by her contact with the rocks off the coast of Malne the other day. She was ordered convoyed to the yard for repairs, but there was no yessel in the fleet swift enough to keep up with her, and so she raced down the coast at a sixteen-knot clip, unattended, except when she found it necessary in the reaky condition, to seek shelter in Tomaston Harbor white Hoyal Arcanum Grows.
